What is Consumer Marketing?

Consumer Marketing:

Consumer marketing is a central component of our comprehensive strategy to promote Canmore and Kananaskis as premier travel destinations. Consumer marketing focuses on engaging directly with potential visitors through targeted advertising, social media campaigns, and digital content that showcases the natural beauty, activities, and experiences available in our region. Our efforts are designed to resonate with specific demographics by creating compelling narratives that appeal to their interests and inspire travel.

Consumer Marketing Objectives

- 1. Maintain peak season travel and grow off-season travel
- 2. Attract high-value(s) travellers
- 3. Strengthen our destination brand

Why the Curious Adventurer?

Brand Alignment

Our mission to transform the way we live in our world resonates with those seeking transformative travel experiences. The Curious Adventurer's pursuit of personal enlightenment embodies this spirit and aligns with the rugged and welcoming nature of our community.

Our unfiltered, neighbourly, invigorating, and mountainy essence appeals to the Curious Adventurer's craving for the thrill of adventure in our untouched nature combined with the genuine connection to our local culture.

Our humble, confident, and competent approach attracts a Curious Adventurer who values deep engagement with their surroundings while exploring in a respectful manner.

We promise astonishing adventures that nourish your soul, which caters to the Curious Adventurer's desire for soul-enriching experiences amongst our breathtaking landscapes.

Target Markets

US	Domestic
Primary
California (Los Angeles, San Diego, San Francisco, Sacramento)	Ontario
Texas (Dallas, Houston, Austin, San Antonio)	Quebec (English-speaking)
Secondary
Washington State (Seattle)	British Columbia

Why These Markets?

1. Concentration of our target audience

These regions have a high density of people who embody the Curious Adventurer persona.

2. Air access

The selected markets have frequent and direct flights to the Calgary International Airport (YYC).

3. Alignment with industry partners

Both Destination Canada and Travel Alberta focus their marketing initiatives in these markets. In aligning our marketing efforts, we strengthen and amplify our message.

The Marketing Funnel

The Marketing Funnel is a high-level overview that shows the user journey from learning about a destination to visiting that destination. Each stage is designed to guide potential visitors through their journey from discovering what Canmore and Kananaskis is in relation to Canada and Alberta to choosing our destination for their next adventure.

We work closely with Destination Canada, Travel Alberta, and our local partners to make sure resources are allocated to each level of the funnel from the appropriate source.

The Marketing Funnel

At the Awareness level, Destination Canada and Travel Alberta play a pivotal role in introducing the national and provincial brands, ensuring our target audiences are informed about what Canada, and more specifically Alberta, has to offer. These efforts are focused primarily on US markets, as most Canadians are already familiar with their domestic travel options within their own country.

Once potential visitors move past the Awareness stage, Travel Alberta shifts their marketing efforts the Consideration level, where they target both US and Canadian audiences and shine a spotlight on destinations province-wide, including Canmore and Kananaskis, and differentiate our offerings from other provinces. TCK also runs campaigns to build off Travel Alberta's efforts and begin to differentiate our destination from others in Alberta.

Awareness

Consideration

The Marketing Funnel

The Preference stage is where TCK's targeted marketing strategies aim to position Canmore and Kananaskis as the preferred destination choice in Alberta. This is where we can start to feed more tailored information about the unique places to stay, things do to, and food and dining experiences in our destination through compelling storytelling and breathtaking imagery.

Finally, at the Purchase stage, our focus shifts to converting interest into action. TCK supports our partners by promoting business listings on our website, social media channels, blog posts, itineraries, and our Expedia landing page. This multi-channel approach not only enhances visibility but also provides a direct path for bookings with local businesses.

What is Travel Trade?

Travel Trade:

A key channel to reach consumers in overseas markets is through Travel Trade. Travel trade includes online travel agents, receptive tour operators, tour operators, wholesalers, and travel agents. Often located in the country they are selling to, the travel trade partners have an intimate knowledge of the travellers' interests and motivations, and promote tourism experiences and vacations. Working with the travel trade in a variety of overseas markets helps us navigate changing demographics and economies, and can help your tourism business achieve a "balanced portfolio." Tourism Canmore Kananaskis works with international tour operators on itinerary development support, product knowledge, training and education, familiarization tours, and joint marketing initiatives.

What are Business Events?

Business Events:

The Business Events market encompasses a broad spectrum of gatherings, ranging from corporate conferences and trade shows to festivals and entertainment events. The core of the Events Industry, conferences and business meetings provide platforms for networking, knowledge exchange, and collaboration. The Events Industry contributes significantly to the global and local economy. Events generate revenue for host cities, support local businesses, and create employment opportunities. Events often serve as catalysts for destination management and tourism. Host cities and regions strategically leverage events to attract visitors, boost local economies, and showcase their cultural and infrastructural assets. Events are increasingly aligning with principles of social responsibility and community engagement. Initiatives such as corporate social responsibility (CSR) programs, community outreach events, and sustainable practices underscore the industry's commitment to making a positive impact beyond economic considerations.
